After yesterday's troubles, today everything was so lovely that I remembered why I wanted to come cycle touring. My cold is much better and we did a bit of bike maintenance this morning, so no more balance issues. The Elbe valley from Meissen on upstream is dramatically beautiful. The paths were good and easy to follow. The bikes were running well. The sun was shining. The miles just slipped by easily and we crossed the border into the Czech Republic and arrived in Decin. Looking for a place to stay, I stumbled upon the Hotel Andy - so how could we resist? Turns out to be lovely, but I'm slightly disappointed nobody has told me it's my body, my bike yet... Sadly, Bruce's knee was playing up for the last few miles so we may do a bit by train tomorrow for a rest. — with Bruce Ryan at Děčín.

Shona Lines Glad you've had a better day today. Sounds like hard work but fun too.
